What is Genocide?

A genocide is mass murder that is done deliberately, usually targeted towards a particular ethnic group or nation. The most common genocide that is known by almost everyone is the holocaust. However, the recent genocides that have been occurring are ignored such as the: Rohingyas in Myanmar, Christians and Yazidis in Iraq and Syria, Christians and Muslims in the Central African Republic, Dafuris in Sudan,

Rohingyas in Myanmar

Myanmar is predominantly a buddhist country and Rohingyas are one of the ethnic minorities that reside in the Rakhine State, Myanmar. They are Muslims and are considered as illegal immigrants from Bangladesh. At least 700,000 have fled Myanmar to Bangladesh for safety due to 6,700 Rohingyas being killed since 2017.

Christians and Yazidis in Iraq and Syria

After ISIS carved its caliphate, they sought to systematically exterminate Yazidis, Shiites, and Christians as well destroy their villages. Furthermore, they carried out mass rape in these communities.

Christians and Muslims in the Central African Republic

The Central African Republic, has been embroiled in a civil war since 2013. After the war subsided in 2016, ethnic tensions have drastically increased as a readily a genocide may be taking place between the Christian militias and the Muslim coalition.
