

#EndHumanTrafficking

Human trafficking, also known as “Modern day slavery”, is the trade of humans to use for forced labor, sexual slavery, forced marriage, and for other illegal means.

India, China, Russia, Venezuela, and other countries have a large amount of human trafficking cases. For the majority of the cases, labor exploitation is the result, but sexual exploitation, like forcing kidnapped girls to become prostitutes, is also a major result. Human traffickers usually target unattended children or women and kidnap them. However, many fall victim to this to escape poverty or for money.

There are many campaigns against human trafficking---for example, the Blue Heart Campaign, which is international, and #LionHeart, which works to prevent the exploitation of kids in India.
